Spend too much time lecturing on one thing for more than 60 minutes. Need to let the students to do some project during the class time and be able to one to one to make sure the students understand the progress.

I admire Max, he is a great teacher with great ideas and all that. However, sometimes he explains over and over again and we already got it. Sometimes that makes other students to lose motivation. I suggest maybe he should TRY to give us time to do our work during class so he can give one on one feedback and all that. Also, sometimes students doesn't want to be up there in front of class and show her/his work. Maybe he should try to encourage but at the same time not to make us go up there if we are not feeling comfortable doing it so. Overall he is a GREAT, and BRILLIANT teacher, seriously. :]

I admire Max for his such intelligence, the way he handled displaying very quickly with such shortcuts on Web Design. The problem is that he attended the conference in Norway and missed teaching four times. It would be wiser that he should plan attending conferences during the summer instead of during the semester in order to teach more. He repeated displaying too much how Flash was done. He did not show how Flash was done step by step insufficiently. It is really complicated to memorize step by step - it would be more better to do homework from Adobe Dreamweaver and Flash Classroom. There are some students in this class very familiar with Flash that they just continue on not showing up in the classroom. I am sorry to say the name of the student, Quintin keeping on working on Laptop sending emails and billing photo orders etc, while Max was giving lectures. It is really not fair that some of the students who did not participate and keep on skipping classes got good grades. Good Life for them while I was worked hard to absorb myself into Web Design as I was new to it. It would be better to point out more slower as I was taking note and missed what he instructed. It would be nicer for Max to be more firm and strict with the students and not allow them to chat and work on the computers while Max was giving lectures. I notice he worked hard to get attention from the students - just that he was too flexible. He should tell them to leave the class and consider them that they miss classes in order to halt them from chatting too much or focus too much on the computer. He also should tell Quintin that he had a notetaker and that he should, no matter, pay attention to the class. He is very luck to have us that we help him how to sign some words. There are several times misunderstanding when he uses sign language, no matter how he is really super with web design. I really urge Max to allow us doing homework from the Adobe textbooks and watch how much we learn. It is true that it could be time consuming when I requested for the help from the tutor - sometimes what she explained was different from Max. Now, I am upset that I am unable to complete my last project due to extreme struggling to solve the problems and spending so much time with making lots of efforts. When I asked Max for help, he said he would help me when he had to help others but I waited for him and had to do myself....It would be nice that he takes it seriously when the student asked for help. Yet, he took almost too lightly. When I got a quick help from him, he showed too fast how it was done that I could not get it step by step. Well, I pray that he would be fair with grading my assignments as I didn't once miss the classes.
